A note from Pastor Owen...

"The critics of the Bible seem to feel that if they can find some flaw in dates or in geography or conflicting accounts of events, they can then refute the whole Bible. But the Bible is not inerrant in some legalistic literary sense. Rather, it is infallible in what it claims to be. What it claims to be, very simply, is the Word of God; showing all people how to discover a life that is eternal and authentic. The basic Christian belief about the Bible, then, is that it is not simply a collection of writings by religious devout men, but is inspired by God and comes from Him, through men, to us. The Bible was written in three primary languages by over forty authors during a period of one thousand years. Those who accept the Bible as the Word of God call the Bible 'the book of human destiny' because it tells man who he is...where he has come from...where he is going...and what life is meant to be. Personally speaking, I read the Bible mainly because I have come to know and love the Author and because, through the Bible, the Lord reveals something about His love for me and His plan for me and for all people in any age. You'll be missing something if you're not reading the Bible and letting God speak into your heart!"
