

A note from Pastor Owen Scott...

After being in Christian service for over 40 years, I can say with confidence that what we ARE is of much more use to God and others than what we DO. It is a worldly idea that we should try to do something great for God. Be always and forever who you are. Rejoice in the fact that you belong to Him. When we are fully given over to Christ, we automatically give off a tangible radiance that others can sense. Focus on being like the Master and let Him decide how and where you should be used by Him. A Spirit-filled noble, unselfish individual is a powerful tool in the hand of the Lord. Being is much more important to the Lord's work than doing.
