

A note from Pastor Owen Scott...

I recently read a statement that I found impacting..."Who will cry when you die?" Wow, what a probing question that is. Let me ask a few questions of my own. How many lives will you touch while you have the privilege to walk this planet? What impact will your life have on the generations that follow you? What legacy will you leave behind after you have taken your last breath? So what is it that we need to be doing so that we leave an eternal dent on the people we interact with?

- 1) Live for Christ with all your heart. "Only one life will soon be past. Only what's done for Christ will last". So true!
- 2) Take an interest in people's lives. Be more interested in the lives of others than your own.
- 3) Be aware that you are here for a unique purpose. While you are being a blessing to others, you are adding value to the lives of people around you.

The days turn into weeks...weeks become months...and months slip into years and soon our life is past. Let's be sure our lives are well-lived and that we fulfill the plans God has for us to impact and bless the people he has placed in our lives.
